

Editorial

DUJOH, Volume 9, June 2025

The Dominican University Journal of Humanities (DUJOH) continues its mission of advancing scholarship that bridges the academy and society. With every edition, the journal seeks to provide a platform where critical questions of human existence are explored through rigorous research, constructive dialogue, and interdisciplinary engagement.

This ninth volume reflects the journal's commitment to excellence and relevance. The contributions span philosophy, theology, education, and governance, offering fresh perspectives on challenges that define both the Nigerian and global contexts. By drawing from classical traditions while addressing contemporary realities, these papers embody the journal's aim to foster scholarship that is intellectually robust and socially transformative.

It is our hope that this volume not only enriches academic discourse but also inspires reflection and action toward the common good.

Joseph T. Ekong, OP

Editor-in-Chief